Terry McBride and Jay Boberg

NETTWERKING WITH JAY BOBERG: I.R.S. Records, the fertile breeding ground for cutting-edge artists from the Buzzcocks and R.E.M. to Concrete Blonde and Timbuk 3, has signed a long-term label deal with like-minded Vancouver-based Nettwerk Records. I.R.S. president Jay Boberg explained the genesis of the deal. "Stacy Banet, our A&R person in L.A., brought to my attention some of the artists that they had and brought me up to date on what they were doing. I then checked with our Canadian guy, who runs our Canadian operations up in Toronto, and they seemed like a real exciting young label." What excites Boberg about Nettwerk is his feeling that they are kindred spirits both in terms of music and approach to the music business. "They have a real street-rat kind of passion. They don't really focus on whether or not it will get played on the radio or whether or not the mass appeal audience will like it initially. What they focus on is their own passion for it. The fact that they think it's vibrant, that it's exciting and that it's new. That's exactly what I.R.S. has been doing for the past ten years."

More than that, I.R.S. has thrived on breaking "left of center" artists over the past decade in an industry geared to the mainstream, and now has built its own "army" designed to prevent the "artist leakage" that has plagued the label in recent years—hard lessons that can only be to the benefit of both I.R.S. and Nettwerk. "We were very dependent upon MCA and, before that, A&M in order to carry through a lot of what we wanted to accomplish," Boberg says. "If they didn't believe in it we were kind of left to our own devices. The P&D deal now enables us to be on the front line. Belinda [Carlisle] or R.E.M. would always be wondering 'Well, I.R.S. is behind us, but is MCA? Do we have that extra push?' Now that we have our own army... That puts us in the position where we have the full and final authority." As a result, Boberg feels that "we're in a position to market our artists very effectively in and among the trees."

The hard-earned independent status of I.R.S. is, likewise, "critical" to the Nettwerk agreement. "We now have a deal in which we can offer a license deal to a label like Nettwerk much in the same way that A&M offered one to us ten years ago," Boberg claims. "That is something that we were conscious of, and I have been keeping my eyes open for visionary young labels that are out there to be able to go to them and put forth a proposal such as which Nettwerk and I.R.S. have come to."

All this makes Boberg extremely hopeful about I.R.S.'s upcoming decade and association with Nettwerk. "They have a different angle," Boberg explains. "They're very dance-oriented, almost urban-oriented in some of the bands they're looking at. It's a nice addition to what we're doing. I can't begin to emphasize how excited we are. I think we're now associated with a group of people who I look at being just as important in the early '90s as I think I.R.S. was in the early '80s as a developmental independent label. And with both of us together, I think that we're going to be in the position to really have a lot of success. I look at this as one of the most important signings I.R.S. has made in years."

IN THE STREET WITH CEMA: CEMA Distribution, already the distributors of Capitol, EMI, SBK and Chrysalis Records among others, has entered into a manufacturing and distribution agreement with Los Angeles-based ITS Records and Distribution, Inc. (ITS stands for "In the Street"). ITS president Dan Davis told us that ITS, which will be comprised of a number of small, innovative record companies, would be "an umbrella for independent labels" who would benefit from the distribution clout of CEMA. Davis went on to say that he's been "deluged with calls" from indies interested in the action and should have announcements of distribution agreements within the next two weeks.

For CEMA, the agreement presents an opportunity to extend its considerable hand into the independent label community and expand its product line. Russ Bach, president of CEMA, said, "Our agreements with ITS are an important step in the evolution of our relationship with the independent label community, which historically has been a fertile source of developing talent." The most promising aspect of the deal for music fans was enunciated by Bach when he said, "The combination of independent label A&R with major distribution should result in some great acts coming to the market place." We've been saying that for years...

THE BIZ: MCA Concerts announced that it has been engaged for the exclusive booking and promotion of popular music attractions at Blossom Music Center. MCA also operates the Universal Amphitheatre in Los Angeles (which MCA also owns) and outdoor facilities in Atlanta, Denver and Dallas... Making a big retail splash is Disney's soundtrack to the record setting animation film The Little Mermaid. Composed by Alan Menken, with songs by Menken and Howard Ashman (the pair also created Little Shop of Horrors), the soundtrack has been certified gold by the RIAA with platinum certification expected within a week. Fueling soundtrack sales has been the successful marketing of the movie to adults, coupled with critical acclaim for a truly solid soundtrack in the purest sense of the word—which is to say The Little Mermaid is more than a potpourri of songs which may or may not be heard in the film. In addition, two songs ("Under the Sea" and "Kiss the Girl"), along with the score, have received Golden Globe nominations... Arista Records has sent out an odd batch of postcards featuring a picture of their new Nashville offices. This passes for an announcement of a country music division...

MC Lyte: Sounds Great, More Filling

BY ERNEST HARDY

IN THE RAP GENRE, gender still determines an awful lot: how you're treated in song (or in the rap), how you're perceived and treated by fellow rappers, what audience expectations are... Only heavy metal can be as brutally backward-minded when it comes to the division of the sexes.

A strong glimmer of hope comes from the fact that 1989 was a banner year for women rappers. Queen Latifah, Shelly Thunder, Roxanne Shante, Ms. Melodie and Neneh Cherry all released albums that not only shattered stereotypes, but—in varying degrees—also expanded the medium within which they were working. 1989 was also the year in which Atlantic Records released MC Lyte's Eyes on This, the long-awaited follow-up to Lyte as a Rock, her debut album.

When the teenaged Lyte crashed onto the rap scene with the hits "I Cram to Understand U" and "10% Dis," several eyebrows were raised. She was nobody's plaything, no passive reactor whose personality was defined by creating answer records to the fellas. Outspoken, down to earth, and possessing a razor-sharp wit, Lyte recently spoke to Cash Box on a number of issues.

MC Lyte and D.J. K-Rock

On misogyny and sexism in rap: "See, you can't tell people not to do it if it sells. And it's selling. I think it's to each his own. Rap really has a lot to do with personality and you can't tell someone to change their personality—'Don't say this,' and 'Don't say that,' when that's really them."

On rap contributing to, versus merely reflecting, problems in society: "Your environment shapes and reflects everything. If, in their environment, they say, 'B---, come here,' and a girl comes to them, then that's the way they're going to treat the people in their environment. And this is their whole attitude now. Your personality is based on what's happening around you and that's what goes on around them...so that's what is important for them to rhyme about."

On her collaboration with Sinead O'Connor: "She'd heard 'I Cram to Understand U' in Europe and she liked the way I said 'Shut the f--- up.' (laughs) She wanted me to do the remix of 'I Want Your Hands on Me' so she looked us up, talked to my manager, and everything worked out fine."

On pop music's usurpation of rap: "I don't think that will ever happen because the hard rap will always be the hard rap. I don't think it will get watered down. If anything, the [combining of] pop or R&B and rap will get played out. They're really pushing it...but rap won't get played out." ○

NY THIS SHOW SHOULD HAVE A WARNING STICKER attached to the tickets. May Cause Temporary or Permanent Hearing Damage. But miss it at your own risk. Especially if you are the average 16-22 white American middle-class male, frustrated for no particular reason, filled with more angst than actual anger, a rebel without a clue, let alone a cause. I'm talking about Ministry, of course. The show at the Ritz last week was one of the most powerful, angry, intense, ballistic things I have seen in years, and also one of the most interesting from a social standpoint.

Maybe that should be antisocial. There is definitely an element of violence omnipresent at a Ministry gig, whatever the size. No riots break out, and only one very minor fight Thursday night that I know of, but there is violence in the music itself. It's all part of the package. It's inherently violent, loud, abrasive, and the lyrics are hardly about tea parties and croquet. But to see it done live is to realize just exactly how brutal it really is. It's ritualistic, tribalistic. Ministry masterminds Al Jourgenson and Paul Barker are tribal chief and medicine man, respectively, and vocalists Nivek Ogre (Skinny Puppy), Joe Kelly (Lost Cause), Chris Connelly and The Grand Wizard are warriors going through some rite of passage. The noise created by three guitars, bass, two drummers and a rather large bank of synthesizers is the soundtrack for the war dance, which is basically a lot of throwing one's self around.

Ministry isn't technically industrial, it isn't technically dance music, it isn't technically rock and roll. It is technically perfect, and perfectly...well, perfectly violent. If there is such a thing as perfect violence. But think about it: all the anger, all the aggression comes out through the music, and no one gets hurt. Maybe instead of guns, we should give soldiers guitars and let them work things out that way: musical cyberpunk warfare.

Opening bands Controlled Bleeding and KMFDM never quite attained the mutant beauty that is Ministry, but both were fine in their own right. Controlled Bleeding opts for the anti-melody end of the industrial scale, mostly shouted or chanted lyrics over a heavy backbeat. They ended their set by destroying a metal box and a 50-gallon drum. On the Ritz stage, this had little or no effect. In fact it looked rather silly. It would have been much more effective in a small club. KMFDM, on the other hand, is almost more of a turned-up, tuned-in rock band. The noise, the beat and the technology are industrial, but KMFDM is more song-based, and is exceptionally tight musically, programming aside. The only complaint I had is that the guitarist's interesting fashion statement—a fairly short tunic over a pair of stockings, basically bare-assed—tended to be a bit distracting at times. Decent legs, though.

Hullo, Cleveland.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to a computer malfunction, the last lines of Kay Knight's Buzz column of January 20 were inadvertently deleted. The column is reprinted here in its entirety.)

NA MUSIC CITY WAS VERY MUCH alive and well during a recent night of excitement and exceptional entertainment—one that I won't soon forget. It was the Second Annual Marlboro Country Music National Talent Roundup, held at Nashville's Stockyard Restaurant at the Bullpen Lounge.

Eight regional finalists competed for the evening's prizes and Angel Train from Boston, Massachusetts wasn't singing any sad songs when they walked away with the grand prize.

As the first place winner, Angel Train was awarded $30,000, as well as 40 hours of recording time at Omni Sound Studios in Nashville, with famed record producer Barry Beckett at the board.

"We're thrilled," Diane Cannon, lead singer of Angel Train, explained. "This really is the culmination of a dream, and we're very excited about working with a producer of Barry Beckett's stature. We're especially appreciative to Marlboro Country Music for making it all possible."

Angel Train is comprised of Cannon on vocals and acoustic guitar, Jamie DeCato on drums, Tom Miller on vocals and bass, and Rick Plant on lead guitar and vocals. The group was formed just two years ago and is a favorite on the New England country music scene. They are a high-energy band in the Flying Burrito Brothers/Emmylou Harris tradition and had the standing-room-only crowd fired up during their entire performance.

The Terry Thompson-Pickham Band from Tampa, Florida was awarded the second prize of $10,000 and the third prize winners, Unwound, from Pittsburgh took home $7,500.

The other competing bands were: Tim Gillis Band, representing New York, New York; the Virgil Kane Band, representing Chicago, Illinois; Hot Walker Band, representing Detroit, Michigan; Darn Thirsty Cowboys, representing Denver, Colorado and Susie Brandt, representing Tulsa, Oklahoma.

The eight competing finalists were selected through regional Marlboro Country Music Talent Roundup competitions held throughout the country in October and November. The finalists were judged at the Marlboro Talent Roundup on musical and/or vocal ability, originality, choice of material, stage presence, audience response and a sense of professionalism.

Each of the eight regional winners were awarded $7,500 cash and opened the Marlboro Country Music concert in their market. As winner of the Boston-area regional competition, Angel Train opened October 27 at the Worcester Centrum for Alabama, George Strait, Ricky Van Shelton and New Grass Revival.

The Marlboro Country Music National Talent Roundup is the final event in the Marlboro Country Music 1989 program. This year's program featured 10 country music superstars in nine cities across the nation and marked the inaugural year for the Marlboro Country Music Military Tour, saluting servicemen across the United States. Entering its third year as the tour's national charity, Second Harvest, America's only food bank network, received $1 from each ticket sold at the arena concerts.

Since 1983, Marlboro Country Music concerts have been staged in over 77 cities and have entertained more than one million fans. Marlboro Country Music has truly become recognized as one of the premier tours in country music and as was the first national competition, this year's show was one of excellence. I look forward to the same excitement and extraordinary enjoyment next year that I experienced during this year's Marlboro Country Music National Talent Roundup. It was truly a night of fun to long be remembered.

UK BUT WHERE'S FRANKIE VALLI?: Is it world domination for New Kids on the Block? Although it seems that way with their string of U.S. hits being mirrored in the UK, it doesn't necessarily mean they're laughing all the way to the bank. This week they achieved the dubious honor of being the lowest-selling #1 in 20 years, with "Hanging Tough." According to Gallup, the UK chart body, the usual sales for a #1 record is 77,000 per week. The NKOTB single sold just 30,000, which, although affected by a seasonal drop, is still an unprecedented low figure.

Also, sales of the seven-inch single fell below 50% of the market for the first time since it became the leading format in 1959. So then, it's true: the death throes of the single have arrived.

MEANWHILE, violinist Nigel Kennedy's album of Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons" has entered the pop charts. Another unprecedented feat, but not necessarily an unplanned one. Kennedy, a virtuoso who tries to look like Sid Vicious and thinks Beethoven was the ultimate punk, even looks like a pop star. He has regulation pop-star pointy cowboy boots and leather jacket, wildish spiky hair sometimes done up in a Springsteen-esque bandana, and doesn't wear tails to perform.

He says that was an accident.

"One day I left them in New York and had to go to a London market for a second-hand '60s dinner suit because I was performing that night," Kennedy claims. "Then everyone came up to me saying how great it was what I was doing for classical music, breaking traditions, crossing barriers. I thought that was major cool." ("Major," "cool" and "monster" are Kennedy's favorite words.)

There are at least a dozen versions of "The Four Seasons" hanging around in the classical charts. Kennedy's, at #1 for the past six weeks, has outdone them all—seriously outdone them all. It sold 25,000 in the week before Christmas, whereas most classical records in this country are expected to sell only 8,000 a year.

Kennedy's version is different from the others. He plays the fast bits faster, the quiet bits near to inaudible, the loud bits boom-boom, and the slow bits dead-slow-stop. (After all, the "Summer" movement is about hot, weighty oppression and asthma, from which Kennedy and Vivaldi both suffered.) In short, Kennedy plays classical music for the pop ear.

His career is being masterminded by manager John Stanley, whose previous clients include everybody from the Bay City Rollers to Ronald Reagan. He has seen that Kennedy's product is worked by both the classical and strategic marketing departments of EMI.

"Why shouldn't a classical record mean business?" Stanley asks. "Gramophone magazine boasts that 90% of its readership is male. What about the women, aren't they supposed to be interested in classical music? Most of Nigel's fans are female. Why shouldn't classical music be for everybody?"

Stanley has been examining marketing surveys and consulting the Henley Institute, where he has made certain discoveries.

"The '90s will be about older-age dominance," Stanley claims. "People will be more assured in themselves, less dependent on peer pressure. There will be fewer BMWs and more whatever you want to drive." This translates as fewer faddish pop stars.

Stanley always believed in his protege, who was not the star pupil at the Menuhin school but one of the most cocky. Kennedy says he flourished because he was in a worse position than anyone else.

"Soon after I got there my mother remarried and moved house," he remembers. "So I had a disrupted home life and no friends to go back to. There were a lot of heavy egos down there. All they wanted to do was teach you to play like them. But I had already learnt that you can depend on no one and you had to play in your own way and totally for yourself."

Stanley has also cottoned on to the trend of non-vocal music. While dance music flourishes for the younger age group, the more dominant, older age group (about 30 on) are left wondering what to buy.

"Consumers are in their minds eight years younger than they are in real life," Stanley says. "They feel alienated by these old wrinkly pop stars who are at last showing their age. But they don't want to give up music because this is the generation that has chosen and guided. They are not interested in dance music or singles. That's when they discover Nigel and once again become pioneers."

Kennedy is an avid and voluble fan of the Aston Villa football team. He changes his accent with a chameleon's instinct when he talks about them, just to prove he's got the common touch. He lives with Brix E. Smith, who left Mark E. Smith of the Fall to be with him. Kennedy wears crystals for luck, longevity and calm. He is a man of the people all right, accepted by loutish soccer supporters, mystic New Age right-on crystal dealers and classical girl-groupies who want to know all about the recapitulation of the fourth bar of the third movement, etc., etc...

Stanley concludes: "He's one of the boys. He has done for the classical world what Phil Collins has done for the pop world. Traded on being ordinary, he is just the right side of being challenging."

THE YOUNG & THE RESTLESS DEPT.: Writer/artist/actor Michael Damian, with his third single "Was It Nothing at All?," has another CHR hit from his debut Cypress Records LP Where Do We Go From Here? Last summer Damian's cover of David Essex's "Rock On" became a #1 hit single, and was then coupled with an extensive nationwide tour. Damian is especially happy about "Was It Nothing at All?," due to the fact that the ballad is his own original composition. Additionally, he is scheduled to return to The Young and the Restless in mid-February, where he will continue to play the character of Danny Romalotti. The show is once again planning to parallel Romalotti's activities with Damian's real-life situation, as both will be entering the recording studio to begin work on second albums. (Previously, this past summer, the show used concert footage from Damian's tour to represent scenes from Romalotti's own series of tour dates.) Damian will also be the very first musical artist to be seen as part of a new anti-drug campaign that will be implemented in the Los Angeles area. Targeted specifically at teenagers, 300 bus benchboards and an assorted number of billboards (all located near various high schools) will feature a picture of Damian and the slogan "This Rock 'N' Roll Will Never Die," beside a photo of various types of drugs stating "This Rock 'N' Roll Will Kill You." Sponsors include Yamaha Musical Instruments, Coast, United and Wilson Scott Associates, in conjunction with A Drug-Free Los Angeles...

Movement Number Fab Four From the Kevin McDermott Orchestra

By Karen Woods

ASK ANYONE INVOLVED IN MUSIC, whether he be involved in creating it, selling it, signing it or writing about it, and he will undoubtedly tell you the Beatles had a major effect on him, that they were a great influence on his life. About half the time, that influence is about as important and as identifiable as the one exerted by Kraft Macaroni & Cheese.

With the Kevin McDermott Orchestra, the influence is indelible. Not that they sound like the Beatles. They don't. But singer/songwriter/soft-spoken Scot Kevin McDermott learned the art of writing from the masters. His lyrics are straightforward, poignant, honest; he puts words together and they fit. He doesn't use them to become more or less than what he is. The ultimate test in songwriting: could the lyrics be spoken, used in conversation, without sounding atrocious? In this case, yes.

As much as the words make sense, so does the music. The melodies are engaging, the songs have logical beginnings, middles and endings. They aren't just there to hold up a hook—kind of like music as literature.

All of which may sound like a somewhat didactic description of an exceptionally pretty record. But beauty doesn't have to be ephemeral, it can be solid and comfortable as well. Attempting to be poetic and obscure in describing McDermott's music would probably get a laugh out of McDermott himself. He has a very healthy amount of Glaswegian realism that keeps him grounded. As romantic as some of the songs on Mother Nature's Kitchen can get, it's an eyes-open sort of romance, the kind that comes from experience, and the acceptance that good is followed by bad is followed by good.

"I like the human element in music," he explains. "So what if we've got a few rough edges and a wee wrinkle here and there. That's what communicates something, warmth or humor or whatever. I have this analogy that if you have this Van Gogh painting and you put it side by side with the paint-by-numbers version, you would immediately see that one had some life to it and one didn't have life. What gives the original one life is the wee mistakes and smudges, because that's what the artist did. That's the way I see music. It's supposed to have flaws built into it. That's what makes it human, brings it to life."

There is, of course, the monetary reason for the invention of paint-by-numbers. "I know there are people making fortunes by applying a blueprint sort of thing, like 'We'll draw around this one, and then we'll have another one, and then we'll draw around that...' I mean, that's fine, if you understand it, but I hate the way it's cynically used...like on MTV in this country, people turn it on and they see big hair and leather and all that, and they think that's all music has to offer. It couldn't be further from the truth."

On the subject of truth, McDermott has a short, succinct description of his own band, one that is as refreshing as the music itself: "We don't have any disguises. We have half-decent songs and we play well. We've got a bit of substance, but we know how to entertain as well. I wish I could go see a band like us."

The Kevin McDermott Orchestra—which includes brother Jim on drums, Steph Greer on bass, and Marco Rossi on electric guitar—came together at the end of 1986, after McDermott had been through two rather different versions of his musical career to date. He started out in 1978 in a band called the Suede Crocodiles, a punk/postpunk band in his hometown of Glasgow. "I think we thought we were punk," McDermott says, "but I think we were more of a thrash/'60s sort of band. We didn't know what we were doing, none of our friends knew what they were doing, but suddenly we were all starting record labels, managing bands, in bands... We didn't know why we were doing it. It was the thing to do. Those were inspiring times."

But like all good things, this one started to come to an end, and McDermott was casting about for something else to do. "I was getting a bit sick of it," he remembers. "There were a lot of things I liked, but suddenly everything seemed to be becoming a bit corporate. There was this friend of mine I used to go see, he was a folk musician, and I thought it was a pretty brave thing to do, to stand there with your guitar and sing. So I just wanted to have a go at it, to see what it was like."

He laughs. This was a bit before the resurgence of the "folk" movement. "At that time, you couldn't get arrested for doing that," McDermott says. "But I did get to travel all over Europe and America." The Kevin McDermott Busking Tour had a bit of a different angle to it than many others who took the same roads; he wasn't exactly an angry young man searching for enlightenment. "I wasn't any sort of angst-ridden poet or anything, I went to Paris because I wanted to see Paris, but also because I wanted to play. I wouldn't ever have misled anyone into thinking 'Oh, I haven't suffered enough today, I better go poke needles in my eyes.' I was having a good time. I've seen and experienced things that otherwise I wouldn't have done."

But even so, at the back of his mind, the Fab Four were still playing softly. "I always knew I wanted to come back with a band," he explains. "That kind of more or less inspired me to get back to what dragged me into music in the first place, which was loud, electric guitar music—just sort of beating stuff up. From the time I was knee-high to a grasshopper I thought every band was the Beatles. That was my big thing. Then I took a direct jump more or less into 1978 or '79 into the punk thing." He pauses for a moment, a wee rare pause, mind you. "I can see them as being the same thing more or less, the spirit being that no one knew quite what they were doing. We'd get the sound going, but we didn't know how we did it. It just sort of materializes without any great master plan. I think those times were wonderful. And I think, I hope we have a bit of that spirit still."

The Kevin McDermott Orchestra has just recently wrapped up a U.S. tour with the Alarm, which allowed them to play Mother Nature's Kitchen to a rather broad audience country-wide, and to play it the way McDermott thinks all records should be done live: "moved up a few gears." As far as the critics were concerned, the small orchestra from Glasgow were a welcome surprise. But that wasn't a surprise to McDermott. "All we really need is to be in front of an audience," he says. "To play, you know?" He gives one of those genuine, light-up-your-face sort of grins. "It's quite nice." ○

BMG Distribution Conference: Basking in Milli Vanilli, Teary-Eyed Over A&M, Hoping For Hollywood

BY LEE JESKE

THE BMG DISTRIBUTION CONFERENCE, held January 6-11 in New Orleans, had a different tone and style to it than the last Conference, held a year and a half earlier in Montreal. Whereas the Montreal affair was something of a lovefest—the troops happy with their new German owners and busting their pockets over the success of RCA's Dirty Dancing album—the New Orleans affair was considerably more sober. A sometimes painful restructuring of the division took something of the bloom off this rose, as did the lamented departure of A&M Records.

Two bright spots illuminated the Conference: the rumor that BMG Distribution head Pete Jones has put the company squarely in the running for the much sought-after distribution of Disney's Hollywood Records, and hit doctor Clive Davis, who, in an otherwise somewhat soft year, had delivered, seemingly out of nowhere, the multi-platinum bonanza of Milli Vanilli.

"We are now," announced Jones on the first morning, "the company we always wanted to be."

The Conference was, for the most part, a work-heavy affair, with meetings, workshops, product presentations and motivational lectures scheduled seemingly around-the-clock.

Mike Omansky unveiled his Worldwide Entertainment Marketing, a joint venture between himself and BMG, which, among other things, promises to plug in an interactive Restless Heart 900 number (while at RCA, Omansky pioneered the use of 900 numbers to promote artists with his successful D.J. Jazzy Jeff & the Fresh Prince line), put a Starship promotion on 30 million frozen pizza boxes, market old Haystacks Calhoun wrestling matches, release a soundtrack to Roll and Roller Games and find other promotional avenues that "do not depend on radio airplay."

RCA Records president Bob Buziak—the man, Jones said, responsible for "the making of Nipper hipper"—presided over the first product presentation, previewing upcoming releases from Kings of the Sun, Mitsu (dance music in French), the Sidewinders, Marti Jones, the Cowboy Junkies, Fixx, the Brandos, the Silos, Bruce Hornsby and Raging Slab. RCA's successful Nashville chief Joe Galante unreeled some new Prairie Oyster, Matraca Berg, Earl Thomas Conley and the Judds; Steve Backer, on tape, chimed in with jazz artists Roy Hargrove, Marcus Roberts and Mike Stevens; and Jive's Barry Weiss unleashed Stone Roses, A Tribe Called Quest, White Boy Mike and Ruby Turner. Later that evening, Michael Penn (in his first live appearance with his new band), Restless Heart, Tyler Collins, Mr. Lee, Bobby Ross Avila and the Del Fuegos entertained the assemblage at the New Orleans Music Hall while Cajun chef Alex Patout served up a spicy buffet.

Clive Davis, in rare form, presided over a seven-hour product presentation (including a two-hour break for lunch, which the Conference members had in the hotel while Davis slipped out to K-Paul's). But nobody complained, happy with the fact that Arista just chalked up its biggest quarter in its 15-year history. Nearly 50 tracks were played, some of them two or three times, in three categories: current projects that still have some signs of life (Cindy Valentine, Kashif, Jermaine Jackson and, yes, Milli Vanilli), new artists (from country signings Alan Jackson, Exile and Jeff Thompson to Boxcar, Leila K, Urban Dance Squad, Keedy, Kris McKay, Tityo [Neneh Cherry's half sister] and Every Mother's Nightmare), and old artists either newly signed to Arista or with new projects (including Arista debuts from Roger McGuinn, Jeffrey Osborne and Jennifer Holliday, a new album from the Church, Dionne Warwick Sings Cole Porter and an album of standards from Carly Simon). That evening, at Tipitina's, rock & roller Michelle Moran and country rocker Lee Roy Parnell were brought in by Arista for entertainment, but Davis' crowning moment of the day was pulling Lisa Stansfield out from behind a curtain after declaring her new dance release, "All Around the World," "a modern standard" and playing it four—that's right, four—times. One could see dollar signs lighting up in every pair of eyes in the room.

Also on the agenda were speeches from BMG's Michael Dornemann and, in his first appearance at such a gathering, BMG's CEO Mark Woessner, product presentations from Grudge Records (Crack the Sky, Big Dog, American Angel...), BMG Classics and Private Music, which emphasized its "serious and aggressive expansion into vocals" by playing upcoming releases from Michael Colina, the McGarrigle Sisters, Kristen Vigard and Leon Redbone (who was on hand with a five-piece band for a midday recital), and a consumer survey presentation from Mike Shallett.

With Hollywood at this point merely a rumor, one of the biggest reactions of the Conference came when, after playing Milli Vanilli's "All or Nothing," Clive Davis said, "You didn't need A&M anyway." ○

SHOCK OF THE NEW

I'VE GIVEN UP trying to define alternative music. It will never be defined. It's a Mexican standoff, a permanent grey area, because there are too many categories and subcategories. I have decided to try and define those of us who listen to alternative music instead. Maybe that will help all the new "alternative" departments springing up at major labels to figure out what is going to fly and what isn't. Don't try to fool us, we know who we are and we know what we listen to. We can't explain it to you, but we know.

A very wise friend of mine suggested we might ought to call alternative music "real" music. I liked that idea for about half an hour, then realized it wouldn't work. Besides being extremely elitist, what's real and what isn't? What makes real music real? Who is to say, besides the legion of alternative musos, that "other people's music" isn't as real as our own? Simply because we wouldn't be caught dead buying a Debbie Gibson record (and maybe not even then), and because the only way anyone will take away our indie collection is to pry it out of our cold, rigor-mortised hands doesn't mean our music is any less "real" than that of the average CHR listener.

What differentiates "us" from "them" is the fact that we are supporters of the misunderstood, the eccentric and the deliberately odd. As far as who we are, we're the kids who never felt comfortable at high school dances. We were never cheerleaders or on the football team. We didn't drive Camaros. We always seemed to zig when other people zagged.

We didn't fit in anywhere, and therefore we champion music that doesn't fit in, either, which in a kind of twisted way gives us a hipness factor, a certain aura of being more on the edge and perhaps more dangerous than the average guy who goes to the mall. We dress differently, we wear funny glasses, we have different hair. We don't generally wear pastels, or any shade of beige.

We are our own club, even if we don't know each other. We are loyal to the point of fanaticism. We don't buy whatever record is on the radio or on the charts. We can't name Paula Abdul singles. We can't name the New Kids. We don't care who is on Arsenio this week. We do choose a band, then collect the entire catalog—everything they have ever done: bootlegs, singles, one-off projects, compilations. It doesn't matter, it just has to be complete. I'm still buying Cure bootlegs. I have the Glove record, I have the Fools Dance EP, I have both Three Imaginary Boys and Boys Don't Cry, I have both Happily Ever After and Faith and Seventeen Seconds. I have a six-foot poster of Robert Smith on my kitchen wall. I saw Ministry live for the first time last week, and went to five different record stores looking for Revolting Cocks and 1,000 Homo DJs records. I found a couple, but the point is that it was a mission. Friends who live in different states are always telling me to keep an eye out for this record, or that record, and I ask the same of them.

We are artist development experts. We don't expect perfection, or anything even resembling perfection, from a first record. We don't want perfection, we want honesty. We want integrity. We want someone to tell us the truth, whether we understand it or not. We want to watch our chosen grow, expand, change, mutate, whatever it is they have to do. We will follow them from label to label, we will support solo efforts, we will turn out en masse for reunion gigs, we stick with them through their entire career. If they break up, like the Smiths, or become huge, like R.E.M., we mourn their loss like a family member. God bless R.E.M., but how many seven-year-veteran fans don't get nostalgic when they listen to Murmur or Chronic Town? And who forgives Morrissey?

We are envious of those who are a few years older, or were in the right place at the right time to see the first Damned tour, or the first this tour or that tour. We are sorry we never got to see the Sex Pistols. We are sorry (in some ways) that we were 12 or 13 in 1977, and lived in the middle of Nowhere. We wish we could have been hanging out in CBGBs during the height of the Television/Talking Heads/Patti Smith/Ramones/Blondie era. We still go see the Ramones, even though 15 years later they are still playing that same damn song—the only one they know—and we love them for it.

We believe in independent labels. We believe in independent bands, those who don't follow the herd and sound this way, dress that way, have this manager and that hairdresser. We believe.

Don't forget, we are a large market with a fair amount of disposable income. So the next time you have the opportunity to work with or sign a band that you might not understand, but has that indefinable something that gets people down to the gigs time after time, think twice. They might not sell two million records the first time out, or even the second or the third. But they will build an audience that will not change its fickle little mind or its fickle little heart when someone prettier comes along.

Stay Tuned.

WORLDSTYLE

HEAD OF THE KLEZ: The ever-growing World Music sections of your local record stores (are they still called "record" stores?) are bulging with Jamaican music and Brazilian music and African music, with a few Bulgarian wedding bands thrown in for good measure. These are musics, for the most part, that some part of the world loves and that now we here in little old America are taking to our bosoms.

But somewhere in that world section is a small stack of Klezmer records, which represents a different story: young Americans who have revived the high-riding clarinets, ringing mandolins and weeping brass of Eastern European Jewry. The Klezmorim, Kapelye and the Andy Statman Klezmer Orchestra are three of them, but far and away the best is Boston's Klezmer Conservatory Band, which recorded several records on Vanguard before signing on with Rounder. The band was featured in the recent PBS documentary, A Jumpin' Night in the Garden of Eden, and has even spawned a spin-off: clarinetist Don Byron, who left the band and moved to New York a few years ago, has been leading a pick-up Klezmer ensemble of his own in occasional New York tributes to the late Mickey Katz, the Klezmer/vaudevillian who is best known as the father of Joel Grey, but is widely remembered by your parents as something of a yiddische Spike Jones. Whereas Katz is saddled with the Joel Grey addendum to his name, Byron is saddled with the fact that he's an African-American, not a third-generation Jew. It doesn't hurt the music, but, when he does his heartfelt Katz tributes, it's the first thing people latch on to.

"I had no doubts that Don would continue with the music," says Klezmer Conservatory Band founder Hankus Netsky. "You know, I had a friend who did an interview with Mickey Katz. Mickey Katz himself had checked out the young bands, 'cause Joel Grey kind of keeps up with the stuff. People had been giving him records over the years, and this interviewer said, 'Is there anybody doing this music that you think is worth anything?' And Mickey Katz was bitter, because he thought that he had revived Klezmer music in the '50s and that his contribution had gone unnoticed. But he said, 'Well, not really, except there's this one band in Boston, and there's this black clarinet player. I don't know his name, but he's the only one I heard who really does it right.'"

The Klezmer Conservatory Band began at the New England Conservatory 10 years ago as a one-time project.

"I didn't have very high ambitions at that time," Netsky claims. "I thought we were going to just do one concert. I wasn't really gearing up for a new career. I liked this music—I was doing lots of different kinds of ethnic music. I knew that Jewish music research, or some kind of playing of Jewish music, would be in my future. But all this was a chance to play one concert with students at New England Conservatory.

"I finally got the administration's approval. We had a large, enthusiastic crowd, and when we played this stuff that just hadn't been heard for 50 years—in pretty much its original instrumentation—the audience was knocked over. It was just so far away from any Jewish music they had heard, or any music that they'd heard recently. They really went crazy over it. We just kept getting calls and it became a new career for pretty much everybody."

Klezmer music, which picked up bits of early jazz and vaudeville once it got to America, was quite popular among urban Jewish listeners in the '20s and '30s, but, except for guys like Katz and players who maintained small bands to play for the odd Jewish function, the music had more or less disappeared.

"The key is, for us it's not nostalgia," says Netsky. "It's really a music that has a function, that has a vital function, that was killed for all kinds of strange reasons. All kinds of superficial reasons, reasons that don't really have to do with the music not being valid. I think it was killed off for negative reasons—because the children of the generation that came over here didn't want to be identified as immigrants, because the Nazis killed the Eastern European Jewish community, which ended up having terrible associations. In other words, people didn't want to be partying to the music that was just killed off. It brought back too many sad memories in a way. When the state of Israel was created, that gave the Jews a new focus, which was outside of Eastern Europe. In the early days of Israel it was very much frowned-upon to do anything Eastern European.

"So I think those three things contributed to the demise of the stuff, and I think what happened was, just like with blues, it kind of came back. People saw young people doing the music—and not only young people, but non-Jews doing it, and doing it really well—and said, 'Oh, my God, there must be something there.'"

Lee Jeske

NEWS: T.V.T. recording artists Nine Inch Nails (actually recording artist Trent Reznor) have been confirmed to open for the Jesus and Mary Chain for their upcoming tour. Reznor, whose brand of challenging, provocative, industrial dance music has won acclaim from critics around the country, has put together a band for the tour. (He performed all duties on the album, Pretty Hate Machine.) Definitely see this show if you can.

Nine Inch Nails

Another hot ticket is the one for Erasure's upcoming concert dates. The British duo, touring in support of the Wild! album, sold out their February 16 Madison Square Garden appearance in 1 1/2 hours, while the March 11 date in Los Angeles at the Great Western Forum sold out in a day and a half. They've just announced a second date (March 12) at the Forum.

A few weeks ago here in L.A., (so the mushrooming legend goes) a petite, pale woman entered a small dance club, danced around a bit, and impressed the other patrons with her moves. Shortly after, she went to the DJ with a test pressing and asked that it be played. It was; the crowd loved it. Exit woman, end of story... Except that, by the time the woman left, everyone knew who she was and was dying to get her newest release. Word was, it would be the B-side on her upcoming single. (This future B-side was named after the New York-based dance craze that everyone thought would be a huge crossover/mainstream hit in 1989, particularly after Malcolm McLaren released an album devoted to it.) Only now, that particular effort definitely will not be the B-side of said single (so says a spokeswoman for the singer's label), and the record company is being extremely tight-lipped about the whole thing. C'mon guys, (get it together). Sounds like you're sitting on a winner—and one that's much needed after the disappointing chart performance of the singer's last single...

NEW GROOVES

Picks O' the Week

□ LISA STANSFIELD: "All Around the World" (Arista ADP-9937)

The UK import of this song, and its remix, have been winning fans for a while now, particularly in clubs. "World" is an example of the "softer" dance music (Sybil, Fresh 4, Soul II Soul) that is proving so intoxicating for club-goers right now. Stansfield's roots are in R&B (she was recently engulfed in a racial controversy when a British scribe dubbed her the best soul singer in England) and it's her earthy vocals swarthed in whirling strings and placed against a soft (depending on the mix) beat that sets toes tapping, shoulders swaying and heads bobbing. The US mixes are a little more mechanical than their UK counterparts; the sparseness and space that added to the loveliness of the song have been unnecessarily filled. But there's no denying, even this early in the year, that Stansfield—who gained worldwide attention as lead vocalist on Coldcut's international hit, "People Hold On"—has released one of 1990's best singles. What a way to start the year.

Mr. Fingers (Larry Heard)

□ MR. FINGERS: "What About This Love" (Alleviated Music/Gherkin ML2208)

The press release describes this as "new-age house." Talk about damning with dubious praise. This jazz-tinged, lightly-Housed track is perhaps too soft to do any hard dancing to, but it's a cut that definitely sets a romantic mood. Highly recommended.

□ VARIOUS ARTISTS: The Best of... (HOT Productions)

Very late last year, HOT Productions released a nine-volume, "Best of..." collection of double albums that traces the beginnings of the New York club/underground scenes, the British independent dance scene, early rap artists, and more. The collection titles are as follows: Vols. 1-2,

Singles

□ NEW DEEP SOCIETY FEATURING TAD ROBINSON: "Warehouse (Days of Glory)" (Critical House-Records/Gherkin CH 101)

□ CHARLOTTE MCKINNON: "Dance to the Rhythm" (Jack Pot Records HAL 12147)

□ & MORE: "Materialistic Girl" (Micmac Records MIC-529)

Three absolutely smoking house cuts that were only a hair away from being picks of the week. Charlotte McKinnon's effort has a more pop feel than the other two—without being pop; "Rhythm" fairly bubbles with energy and though McKinnon isn't a belter, she is enthusiastic, driving the cut with her own energy.

& More merely uses house as a starting point, concocting a rich mixture of beats, hooks and raw vocals for a track that truly kicks. Potent, irresistible stuff.

Tad Robinson has one of those big, stripped-to-the bone voices that sound like peak Dennis Edwards (former lead singer of the Temptations). This is Chicago House at its best—raw, undiluted and soaked in sweat. My favorite is the Warehouse-Deep Mix, for which Robinson testifies to the power of the music and the dancer can't help but get swept up in the passion. If this doesn't move you, you're beyond help.

GRAMMY THIS:

Every year I feel this need to beat up NARAS for its jazz Grammy nominations and every year I feel, "What's the use?" Pointing out that the Grammys have little to do with the state of jazz today is like pointing out that network TV is, for the most part, aimed at morons; it sort of goes without saying. I participated on the New York Grammy screening committee this year (I am not a member of NARAS; I joined one year and realized it was hopeless, so I didn't renew) and I must say that a number of very well-meaning, knowledgeable people put a lot of hours into making sure everything is nominated in its right place, etc., before handing the list to the general NARAS population, which then automatically presses the buttons of the names it knows; like any and every Marsalis up for anything.

But, look, any organization that thinks Don Henley is the most important thing in pop music has its head screwed on incorrectly, no? So, for those of you who missed them, here are what the Grammy jazz nominations look like:

FEMALE VOCALS: Ruth Brown (Blues on Broadway), Diane Schuur ("The Christmas Song"), Anita O'Day (In a Mellow Tone), Dee Dee Bridgewater (Live in Paris), Janis Siegel (Short Stories).

MALE VOCALS: Lou Rawls (At Last), Dr. John (In a Sentimental Mood), Joe Williams (In Good Company), George Benson (Tenderly), Harry Connick Jr. (When Harry Met Sally).

VOCALS BY DUO OR GROUP: James Moody/Dizzy Gillespie ("Get the Booty"), Joe Williams/Marlena Shaw ("Is You Is Or Is You Ain't My Baby"), Take 6 ("Like the Whole World's Watching"), Dr. John/Rickie Lee Jones ("Makin' Whoopee"), Ray Charles/Lou Rawls ("Save the Bones for Henry Jones").

INSTRUMENTAL SOLOIST: Andre Previn (After Hours), Miles Davis (Aura), John Patitucci ("Bessie's Blues"), Wynton Marsalis (The Majesty of the Blues), Chick Corea ("Sophisticated Lady").

INSTRUMENTAL PERFORMANCE, GROUP: Andre Previn/Ray Brown/Joe Pass (After Hours), Chick Corea Akoustic Band (Chick Corea Akoustic Band), Wynton Marsalis (The Majesty of the Blues), Yellowjackets (The Spin), Branford Marsalis (Trio Jeepy).

FUSION PERFORMANCE: Miles Davis (Amandla), Pat Metheny Group (Letter From Home), Larry Carlton (On Solid Ground), John Patitucci (On the Corner), Terri Lyne Carrington (Real Left Story), Joe Sample (Spellbound).

BIG BAND PERFORMANCE: Miles Davis (Aura), Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra (The Definitive Thad Jones), the Count Basie Orchestra (The Legend, the Legacy), the Duke Ellington Orchestra (Music is My Mistress), the McCoy Tyner Big Band, Uptown/Downtown.

In related areas, Corea, Metheny and Dave Grusin got nominations for Best Instrumental Composition; Grusin got a nod for his Fabulous Baker Boys soundtrack (what, no Best Female Vocal nomination for Michelle Pfeiffer?); Les Hooper, Frank Foster, Maxine Roach, Thad Jones and Grusin were nominated for Best Instrumental Arrangement; Foster, Grusin, Marc Shaiman (he of When Harry Met Sally) and Don Sebesky were nominated for Best Instrumental Arrangement Accompanying Vocals; Best Liner Note nominations included Phil Schaap (Bird: The Complete Charlie Parker On Verve), Gene Lees (Bill Evans: The Complete Fantasy Recordings) and Martin Williams, Dick Katz and Francis Davis (Jazz Piano); and, for Best Historical Album, Blue Note 50th Anniversary Collection Volumes 1-5, and Jazz Piano (Various Artists 1989-1964), Nat King Cole and the King Cole Trio.

A VALENTINE: "For 56 years Ella Fitzgerald has been singing her heart out," reads the ad. "On February 12, a few of her admirers will return the favor." On that date, a tribute to the great Fitzgerald, to benefit the American Heart Association, will take place at New York's Avery Fisher Hall. Participating? Lena Horne, Itzhak Perlman, Bobby McFerrin, Cab Calloway, the Manhattan Transfer, Andre Previn, Dizzy Gillespie, Linda Ronstadt, Savion Glover, Joe Williams, George Shearing, Honi Coles & the Copasetics, Jessye Norman and an astonishing Benny Carter Big Band (David Sanborn, Phil Woods, James Moody, Jimmy Heath, Nick Brignola, Red Rodney, Harry "Sweets" Edison, Clark Terry, Jon Faddis, Urbie Green, Slide Hampton, Benny Powell, Jack Jeffers, Herb Ellis, Hank Jones, Ray Brown and Louie Bellson). Tickets are $40-$125 and American Express is the sponsor.

■ JAZZ PICKS

□ ARTIE SHAW: 1949 (Musicmasters CIJD6 0234)

The label that has done such a fine job issuing previously unreleased Benny Goodman recordings now unleashes a passel of fine previously unreleased sides by another great clarinet-led big band: Shaw's underappreciated 1949 ensemble. A valuable, swinging, bebop-influenced set featuring fine solos by the leader, Al Cohn, and Dan Fagerquist and arresting charts by, among others, Tadd Dameron, George Russell and Gene Roland.

□ BOBBY SCOTT: For Sentimental Reasons (Musicmasters CIJD6 0229)

The gruff-voiced, conversational singer/pianist, best known as a songwriter, turns in a warm, cozy tribute to the Nat Cole Trio. A perfect late-night, unwinding-with-a-bottle-of-wine or -bourbon album.

□ RAY BROWN/JOHN CLAYTON: Super Bass (Capri 74018)

Nobody'd argue with the title: this drips with bass virtuosity. At times it's a bit much (the overdubbed, soupy, 10-bass "Happy Days are Here Again"), but when these two get into a popping swing groove, backed by Jeff Hamilton's drums and the late Freddie Green's rhythm guitar (Jeff Clayton's aboard on reeds)...well, you won't run for cover screaming, "Bass solo!!!!!"

□ BUDDY TATE/AL GREY: Just Jazz (Reservoir 110)

Turn these Basie vets loose on some blues and standards and just stand back. This '84 date swings from the ground up.

□ TOMMY FLANAGAN/J.R. MONTEROSE: A Little Pleasure (Reservoir 109)

Monterose, a neglected tenor veteran with a personal, warm sound and an easy-going approach to a solo, meets up with Flanagan, the pianist who defines good taste. A breezy, unruffled, elegant plate of duets, recorded in '81.

RHYTHM & BLUES

ROCKIN' TIME DEBUTS: The city of Miami has long been a hotbed of fresh new innovative talent. Therefore, with the dawning of the new decade, it is not surprising to see another in the long line of young entrepreneurs spreading their wings.

Mike Morgan, a native of Jamaica, has been a long-time promoter of stage shows and productions around the world. Thus the expansion into the actual formation of his own record company does not come as a surprise. During those many successful projects, Mike's desire to learn more about the recording industry prompted him to enroll in a two-year college course to further enhance his business savvy about the music business and to learn practical applications.

Morgan, a songwriter and producer, decided to take the plunge, thus giving birth to Rockin' Time Records, for which he serves as president. After making the decision to enter the business, Morgan subsequently went on a torrid talent search that took him from his native Jamaica to Miami and Europe.

His search was not in vain. He found two hot young rappers, Martis and K-Rad, who record under the moniker of MK2. These talented young men hail from the sun-drenched coast of Jamaica. Their debut single (the company's first), a two-sided 12-inch entitled "Get Down" (backed with "Hold On"), from their forthcoming album entitled We Wanna Party, is already receiving airplay at clubs and several key radio stations, especially in Europe. This young duo has been burning up turntables and the airwaves, making people forget about the winter's cold while garnering a significant legion of fans.

These early indicators certainly are proving that Morgan has made a wise decision to form a record company to tie in with his concert promotional activities. Morgan said, "My goal is to achieve platinum status with this initial release, followed by more of the same with several artists." His ultimate goal is to build a highly successful, full-service record company, consisting of his concert promotions company, a production company and a management company, all operating under one umbrella. Morgan wants to be able to employ many of today's young professionals who have the talent, but not the vehicle to express their talents or get a break in the music business.

He spoke very excitedly about a young female artist, a singer/rapper named Kimra, with whom he is working closely on her debut project. Morgan is committed to continuing his search to find some of the world's best talent for his young but well-seasoned Rockin' Time Record label. The record company was a vision he had while building his highly successful company promoting and producing international stage shows. It was his perception to combine the spice of the islands with the urban grooves of today. His tenacious talent search, in the United Kingdom and the United States, has resulted in a stable of six artists currently in production. You can expect releases from them within the next few months, assuring everyone a Rockin' Time.

CASH BOX MICRO CHART

Dr. Ruth Singletary

She is a state-certified teacher and has a state-certified principal certificate. She was honored with a doctor of divinity degree from Seashore Bible Institute, in Lakewood, New Jersey in 1981.

Dr. Singletary knows about life's ups and downs. After a failed marriage and the loss of one of her five children, she overcame being on welfare and continued her quest by believing in God and working hard to overcome obstacles while recording gospel songs and spreading the word of God to as many souls as possible.

The trail was not easy, "but God brought me out," says Dr. Singletary, who has written proposals for the board of education, of which a few have been accepted and implemented in the schools. One was entitled "Religion in Human Culture" on the junior high school level. She is also an accomplished songwriter. She has recorded songs like "Run and Don't Look Back" and "Tell the Devil to Let Them Go" for her own record label and recording company. She is trying to reach the young as well as the older people for Jesus. She believes, "If the gospel is pushed around town, then crack and ice will stay down." She has always loved gospel—her late grandfather was a minister, her late grandmother sang in the choir, her late mother was a singer. As a matter of fact, her entire family either sang in a choir or had their own gospel group.

God blessed and called Dr. Singletary to open her own church in 1981, after she had traveled around the country, preaching and singing for years. Many have been saved and delivered through her ministry. A strong supporter of gospel in every way, she prays that gospel will come back into the schools. She has started an Afro-American Culture Gospel Chorus in the school in which she works. She feels God is calling all souls, for He said, "All souls are mine, but the soul that sinneth, it shall die." She believes that gospel can and will reach all religious demoninations or any souls that will listen, which will make for a better world.

I would like to thank her for contributing this information to our gospel column. Next week we will focus on an historical background of gospel music provided by Dr. Ruth Singletary. She can be reached at The World Evangelical Deliverance Church, 3529 Third Avenue, Bronx, New York 10456, or by calling (212) 590-8168.

NOTE: The following material was taken from Famous Negro Music Makers by Langston Hughes. The information was compiled by Dodo Mead.

THE FISK JUBILEE SINGERS were one of the first groups that sang spiritual music, as they recalled the slave catastrophe after Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation. In fact, seven of the members of the first group of the Fisk Jubilee Singers were born in slavery. The Fisk School, in Nashville, Tennessee, was established by the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Church in 1866, three years after the signing of the proclamation.

It was a very poor high school, and was intended as such, because most of the students were almost grown before they could go to school. Most could not read or write, but the most important thing for them was to learn to read the Bible before they died. There was little money for books and other materials. Many white missionary teachers from the North kept Fisk going. In 1871, they established their first college classes, and trained teachers on the elementary level.

George L. White was a musician who through his music taught the idea of hope and began to raise money for the institution. He taught his small group of singers (nine boys and girls) to sing such songs as "Home Sweet Home" and "Wine Is a Mocker," which were the songs of the day. They also began to sing songs they heard their parents sing, like "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen" and "A Little Wheel Is Turning in My Heart." They received little encouragement and some singers felt ashamed to sing to white people outside of their schools for fear they would laugh at their dialect or their "slave music." They wore clothes borrowed or lent by white teachers.

In 1871, they started out to sing, to make history for America. It seemed that everywhere they went, it was financially poor, even though they could really sing. It seemed no one wanted to hear their songs regardless of how beautifully they were done. Mr. White asked them to sing their own spirituals, which they had been afraid to sing. When he saw a chance for them to sing at a church conference, they sang "Steal Away to Jesus," and the white audience loved it so much they cried. After this emotional reaction, the Fisk Singers were never afraid to sing their own spirituals again. That's how the spirituals took their first step toward worldwide appreciation and acceptance.

SPIRITUAL SYNOPSIS:

This week's column is an historical synopsis of gospel music as recorded by Langston Hughes and compiled by Dr. Ruth Singletary (B.A., M.A., M.S., Adv.M., D.D.), pastor of the World Evangelical Deliverance Church in Bronx, New York. She received her bachelor's degree in history from the City Universities of New York, her master of arts degree from New York University in religious education and advanced master's degree in religious education and supervision and administration from New York University.

From Oberlin to Brooklyn, money started coming. A famous minister, Henry Ward Beecher, the brother of Harriet Beecher Stowe, invited the singers to his church. It was during this time their name officially became the Jubilee Singers, after the day of jubilee, when Moses brought the children of Israel out of Egypt, from bondage, like themselves. The donation basket was full of money from that concert in Brooklyn. Continuing their travels, they not only sang spiritual music but other American music like "Free as a Bird to the Mountain" and "Turn Back Pharaoh's Army."

The Jubilee Singers received $4,000 to send back to their college. During the tour, they appeared at the White House where they touched many emotions with their rendition of "Go Down Moses." Before they returned to their dormitories in Nashville, they had sent $20,000 to the Fisk treasury. That's how they got the money to build Fisk University to where it is today.

They experienced many difficulties in their lives, as did the acceptance of the reality of their music. One day they were able to sing what turned out to be one of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr's favorite spirituals, "Thank God Almighty, I Am Free at Last." As in the old days, when the slaves had no way of protesting their fate, without danger of being whipped or killed, they sang their music to send or give a message. Their songs were called "Songs of Sorrow." But the Jubilee singers kept spirituals alive and their songs began to get more joyful as they sang "Joshua Fought the Battle of Jericho" and "Little David Play on Your Harp," and others. As the sad songs made people weep, the joyous songs made people happy and pat their feet.

They ultimately sang from country to country, from continent to continent. When they finally came home to Fisk University, they brought home $150,000. They subsequently built Jubilee Hall at Fisk and made musical history of spiritual music all around the world.

REALITY IN OUR INDUSTRY IS OFTEN MORE ENTERTAINING than the movies. If you don't believe it, let's go back to a day around last Christmas. The scene at the mezzanine of the New York Hilton was a compressed panorama for the uninitiated. Promotion executives were running in and out catching up to superiors with last-minute details. Spaniard singer/composer Jose Luis Perales, oblivious to the corporate commotion around him, fastened up the zippers of his daughters' down coats. Compatriot chanteuse Paloma San Basilio buried the chiseled contours of her beautiful por que me abandonastes face in a newspaper. In another booth, tall,

Jose Behar, VP & GM, Capitol/EMI Latin

gangly, Hollywood-based Capitol/EMI Latin vice president and general manager Jose Behar, with a mane of hair that would have made the MGM lion envious, looked over with judicious worry at a typical New York breakfast treat—a toasted bagel with a slab of cream cheese. This drastic deviation from his Californian calorie consumption didn't seem to make Behar as anxious as the expectations of things to come. The smart-money line assured me the worries sprouted from the recent signing of star salsa singer Eddie Santiago away from TH/Rodven Records—a deal perceived as not totally judicious considering Santiago's oft-rumored vocal-chord troubles, and TH/Rodven's indubitable strength in the Puerto Rican salsa front as well as its expected backlash at losing the label's bebe mimado. The truth almost spilled when Behar, just prior to commencing the attack on the bagel, blurted "Texas is a haven."

By the first week of the year, rumors buzzed all over San Antonio regarding the imminent sale of Bob Grever's Cara Records. With CBS on the fifth year of a promotion and distribution deal with the important Tejano label, the smart money simply assumed that the giant would become Cara's next proprietor, as it already was its de facto operator. On January 10, Capitol/EMI Latin surprised industry observers with its announcement of Cara's acquisition, effective January 1, 1991, with an artist roster that includes popular groups such as La Mafia, Xelencia, Latin Breed, La Fiebre, David Marez and recently announced Grammy nominee Emilio Navaira. Within hours, in yet another startling move, CBS called for a press conference two days later at San Antonio to announce its signing of La Mafia, even though it's widely known the group still has three productions pending in its Cara Records contract assumed by Capitol/EMI Latin. Knowing when a useful source had run its course, I had my 1-900-SMART$$ number disconnected.

A retrospective of this situation's genesis is in order. Twelve years ago, with $800 in his pocket but no car of his own, Jose Behar got himself to Los Angeles, a city where a four-wheel set is more important than food in your belly. He commenced learning about this trade from the lower ranks of A&M Records to the top position at Discos AyM by 1983. Behar always stood out for his aggressive management style. I met him then for the first time. He wasn't there to make friends. He took no prisoners. But he got results, and that's all that counts. Eventually he went to CBS as director of its West Coast operations. There Behar was credited with the big-label coalescence of the Tejano market—la onda sound whose industry was bouncing back bigger than ever in spite of the crippling recession of the mid '80s. The pivoting pillar in the scheme was the P&D agreement between CBS and Cara Records, whose stellar roster also included at the time the equally popular Grupo Mazz and Ram Herrera. Top this with the genre's papi chuli, Little Joe Hernandez and his Familia (a band self-titled "The World's Most Dangerous Meskin Band," in mock use of the derogatory ethnic reference of yesteryears, and whose sophistication in areas like merchandising and publishing is far above market norms), signed directly to CBS Records, and we have a textbook case here of extreme market dominance bordering on monopoly.

Behar then came to his current position at Capitol/EMI-Latin, a label already carrying its fair share of big names (Jose Feliciano, Dyango, Rocio Jurado, Mijares, Max Torres, Franco, Lissette, et. al.), and proceeded to sign a substantial number of la onda performers to CEL: Selena y Los Dinos, David Marez, Roberto Pulido, Johnny Hernandez, among others. When CEL went after Mazz, CBS went to court, claiming inside information. The case resulted in the current Mazz release No te olvidare under Capitol/EMI Latin. Now comes the Cara purchase for a figure placed by Radio Bemba in the five-million dollar range, with a projected recoupment period of 3.4 years. One contract term preserves CBS' current distribution agreement until the end of the year, plus a subsequent six-month sell-off period. Another retains Grever as special consultant in charge of Cara's promotion and A&R matters for a seven-year period, at an annual salary in the healthy six digits, plus a percentage of sales. Although unwilling to confirm these details, Grever sounded pleased, alleging that money was not the primary concern. "I wanted Cara's artists to get a chance to break from the ideological barrier formed on our music around the state of Texas. I felt the best chances to accomplish that goal were with Capitol/EMI Latin," he said.

CBS vice president Frank Welzer confidently reiterated the label's strong position in Texas while extending CEL his best for the future. "I'm happy that my good friend Bob Grever made a fantastic deal for himself," he said. Welzer also defended La Mafia's signing (widely speculated in the six-digit realm) as good business, claiming that research showed that the group represented 33% of Cara's annual sales—although he admitted that CBS cannot release any Mafia or Ram Herrera (another CBS inking) product until these artists' contractual obligations to Cara are fulfilled. More importantly, Welzer vehemently refuted my notion of CEL's sudden emergence as the new power in the Tex-Mex market, citing as CBS' the genre's #1 interpreter, Little Joe, plus: a.) the expected reversal of the previous legal decision on Mazz; b.) the deal that brought to CBS heartthrob Ruben Ramos and Texas Revolution; c.) the high hopes placed by CBS on newcomers Alex Montes and Centerfold and Bandango; and d.) the future releases by La Mafia and Herrera. Other industry sources strongly argued against the five-mil price tag. However, all agreed unanimously that Cara's catalog, a veritable onda's quien-es-quien, was virtually virgin. Hence, the innumerable compilations to be released in future years makes this end very profitable.

Through it all Behar remains nonplussed with his comments, and perhaps a little bewildered by the commotion he has caused in his 11-month tenure. Always the good executive, he credited the support from the overall corporate structure above—as in each and everyone at Capitol/EMI and CEMA, and below—as in each and everyone in his promotion and sales team. He said there were months in which things looked really bad, particularly during the transition period that took CEL from being a BMG distributing affiliate to its independence: a six-month delay that, according to Behar, did not prevent the label from meeting its annual sales forecast. Now, he endeavored in setting a one-family concept amidst Cara and CEL's Tejano artists, assuring each and every listener that no artist will be neglected under the new deal.

He also defended the wisdom behind the Eddie Santiago acquisition. "Herb [A&M's Albert] taught me that success can't be stopped, particularly with the superstars because they exude a charisma that set them apart from the rest. I believe Eddie Santiago has that charisma," he said. Behar also dismissed any inferences of competition with his former employer, stating "It's not a matter of ego, of me versus them, or anything like that. It's the kind of thing that when you get home, turn the TV on, lean back on the couch and the day starts to hit you, you still say to yourself, 'Yes, it was the right business move to make.'" Movies ought to be this interesting.

□ BOBBY VINTON: "What Did You Do With Your Old 45s" (Curb 013)

"Remember when we stacked them high as can be?," Bobby "Mr. Blue Velvet" Vinton asks in his latest release, "What Did You Do With Your Old 45s," a kinder, gentler query to those who would mourn the demise of the 7-inch single. It's true, you just can't beat those scratchy old 45 r.p.m. discs of yesteryear. They still sound better than most of what passes for "pop" these days. If Vinton has any say in the matter, this heartfelt tune should have 'em piled even higher and deeper than in the happy days gone by. This one should go right to the top of the heap.

■ Albums

□ THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS: Flood (Elektra 9 60907-2)

This quirky, idiosyncratic duo have returned with more of their uniquely skewed perspective on the world. Puns, wordplay and hyper-cleverness are a Giants trademark, and longtime fans won't be disappointed. Though the humor is generously ladled out, the disc's highlight is "Your Racist Friend," more effective than a slew of teary-eyed, hearts-on-the-sleeves folkies. Witty, biting and to the point. (Ernest Hardy)

□ THE SILENCERS: A Blues For Buddha (RCA 9960-1-R)

This Scottish quartet has fashioned a radio-ready blend of subdued pop on A Blues For Buddha, filled with enough spiritual longing to live up to its title. It's subdued in that the music is gentler and the hooks less obvious than the word "pop" suggests. Combining the driving beats and guitar figures of Euro-dance with folk-based elements is a difficult enough feat to pull off on one album, but when the Silencers put everything together on one song, "Walk With the Night," they're breathing rarefied air. Beginning with an acoustic guitar/bongo intro, the song slowly builds into an aching powerful elegy. What begins as a lonely lament finishes with the artist at home in a universe of like-spirited souls.

Overall, the album's vast textures and atmospheres manage to create consistently soothing moods that reveal a patient hand at work. Lead Silencer Jimmie O'Neill, who cut his teeth writing for Lene Lovitch, demonstrates a finely honed level of craft while tackling the big questions without pretension. "Answer Me," "The Real McCoy," "Skin Game" and "Razor Blades of Love" all have hit potential and combine to make A Blues For Buddha a strong addition to any record collection (David Byrnes)

□ SEX CLARK FIVE: Battle of Sex Clark Five (Bloodmoney, erato #59)

Up until now, Huntsville, Alabama has been known for one thing and one thing only: The Alabama Space and Rocket Center. However, that's not the case anymore. Pure pop fans across the land can trace that trajectory down and find one of the best little combos going—Sex Clark Five.

They've managed to hone down the elusive art of two-minute songwriting, while creating a sound of their own. Sweet girl/boy vocals laid on top of cool popadelic guitar riffs have you humming along, then WHAM!, next song please. In the case of Sex Clark Five, less is more; this LP clocks in with 21 songs, some of which ("Girl I Like" for one) demand your appearance right next to the turntable, so you can play it over (and over). Check out Battle of Sex Clark Five...and wear out the rug in front of your stereo. (Bloodmoney, P.O. Box 30084, Philadelphia, PA 19103) (Robb Moore)

□ RUTH BROWN: Miss Rhythm (Greatest Hits and More) (Atlantic 7 82061-2)

Ruth Brown's comeback, started a few years ago, is one of the best-deserved, and most-earned in a whole trend of comebacks. This double-CD collection is the proof. Though long-touted as a queen of early R&B, Brown is equally adept, and at home, with jazz, blues and standards—examples of which are included in this collection. Includes her best-known hit, "Mama, He Treats Your Daughter Mean." (EH)

□ VARIOUS ARTISTS: New York Rockers (ROIR A-170)

From one of the coolest labels in the world comes an important and thorough documentation of the New York scene, spanning the years 1972-1984. Annotated and compiled by Andy Schwartz, former editor and publisher of the New York Rocker magazine, this thirteen-track cassette provides an excellent insight into a seminal time period in the American punk/new wave movement.

What makes New York Rockers so essential is the fact that it avoids the obvious luminaries like Blondie, the Ramones and Talking Heads, and concentrates on the efforts of the less-popular no wave, art rock, and hardcore bands. Included are amazing live versions of "anti-hits" by Television, 8-Eyed Spy, James Chance, the Dictators, Lounge Lizards and Suicide. The rest are rare studio tracks culled from previously released ROIR tapes, recorded by Johnny Thunders, Bad Brains, Richard Hell and a few others. Anyone who underestimates the significance of these artists is slighting a page in alternative music history. Highly recommended. (ROIR Inc., 611 Broadway, #411, New York, NY. 10012) (RM)

□ CRAZY HORSE: Left For Dead (Heyday/Rough Trade 009)

Crazy Horse, America's original garage band, is back rearing its ferocious head with a collection of explosive rockers equal to their best work with erstwhile leader Neil Young. You may remember them. Crazy Horse began a long association with Mr. Young by playing on his second solo album—post-Buffalo Springfield—Everybody Knows This Is Nowhere. Nobody remembers his first.

That Crazy Horse is a fierce backing band is not news. What's impressive here is that new members Matt Piucci (ex-Rain Parader) and vocalist Sonny Mone have reinvigorated original Crazy Horsers Billy Talbot and Ralph Molina. As a result, Left For Dead kicks as hard as anything the band's done, and that covers some impressive territory. Filling the songwriting buckskins of Young is not, however, easily done. Although there are game efforts—most notably on "In the Middle" and the wistful "World of Love"—as a whole the album is more for fans of the raw, sonic qualities for which Crazy Horse is rightfully known. (DB)

□ VARIOUS ARTISTS: Guitar Speak II (I.R.S. D-82028)

I.R.S. Records continues to lead by example with another solid offering from their innovative No Speak series. Featuring an eclectic line-up that varies from Black Sabbath's Tony Iommi to Hank Marvin, leader of the Shadows, the album hangs together by virtue of the fact that all are players of impressive skill who've made the most of the opportunity/challenge to ply their craft sans vocals. The format itself both demands of the artist compositionally and gives to the artist a greater space to stretch out. It all makes for interesting listening.

Among the surprising showings on Guitar Speak II are Iommi and Frank Marino of Mahogany Rush, who both benefit greatly from the absence of the constrictions and wailing vocals of their usual genres. Other notables include Robin Trower, Jan Akkerman, Concrete Blonde's James Mankey (who contributes the eerily experimental "Feeding on Fear") and studio wiz Harvey Mandel (his solo on the Stones' "Hand of Fate" is godhead), who boasts the funkiest number in the collection with "Snake Bite." A must for guitar aficionados. (DB)

Minnie Pearl: 50 Years of Love

BY KAY KNIGHT

EVERY FRIDAY AFTERNOON, on the Grand Ole Opry's matinee show, this country girl takes the stage with her familiar greeting to the audience—"Howdee! I'm just so proud to be here!" That greeting, from Grinder Switch's favorite daughter, is one that millions of fans have grown to love over the past four decades and one that Sarah Ophelia Cannon herself still looks forward to.

Minnie Pearl was born during the Depression. Sarah Ophelia Colley had a job at the time traveling from small town to small town in the South, putting on amateur musical comedies for church and civic groups. To help publicize the amateur show she was directing in each town, she would appear before the Lion's Club and other luncheon groups. In return, she would do a couple minutes of entertainment for them. She did an interpretation of a country girl, Minnie Pearl, who was sort of a composite of many she had met and seen.

"I think really, she [Minnie] was born when I was," Cannon says, thoughtfully. "She is a result, more or less, of being spoiled when I was a child. I was told to say little speeches, sing a little song and do little dances. I was the youngest of five girls, seven years younger than the last one, so I was kind of like a little grandchild with my family.

"I think that if you could get right down to the root of things, you would find out that Minnie is...really, we're both interchangeable," Cannon says. "I always wanted to show off, and through Minnie, I finally found a vehicle to do that, and I found it late in life."

Sarah Ophelia Colley was 28 years old when she made her first appearance on the Grand Ole Opry, and was 24 when she created the character of Minnie. "I had just about decided that I had created Minnie Pearl but I couldn't find any place to put her and I thought the Lord had intended for me to never do anything with her, just keep her to myself. But apparently he didn't feel that way, so he gave me the opportunity to perform through her."

Minnie Pearl's first professional performance was not on a stage, but at a banker's convention in her hometown of Centerville, Tennessee.

"A banker friend of mine came to me and said, 'Do that thing that you did at the Lion's Club benefit show...that funny routine where you talk about all these characters,'" Cannon remembers. "Well, I got up to perform that night...just killing time until the main speaker got there...and I've been killing time ever since!"

Two days after her performance at the banker's convention, Cannon received a call from a man who told her he was with the Grand Ole Opry. That man was Ford Rush, then program director for the Opry, and he wanted Cannon to come to Nashville to audition for the radio show.

Minnie Pearl's debut performance on the Opry that weekend resulted in 350 fan letters (and she answered every one) and started a legendary association. Today, Minnie Pearl receives 400 letters per week and she still makes sure that each one is answered. She says, however, that that first fan response came as a complete surprise to her, especially after her initial audition with Opry executives.

"I didn't get one laugh from those fellows whom I auditioned for that day and Minnie Pearl at this time..." Cannon hesitates. "You know, I don't think

Sarah Cannon

Minnie Pearl

I've ever told anyone this...but anyway, Minnie at that time was still a very insecure person and so uncertain. Yet, I think that made her more attractive. She was so gentle in those early days, she didn't screech and holler and yell and carry on. She just came out on stage and very quietly said 'Howdy, I'm so proud to be here.'

Cannon says she was so nervous and so afraid waiting to go on stage that first night and she remembers Judge George D. Hay saying to her "I know you're scared, but you just love your audience and they'll love you right back." "And you know, it's a funny thing," Cannon says, "I was coming out of one of the awards shows this past year and Clint Black was there and he stopped me and he said, 'Miss Minnie...' and he was so cute. I'm old, but I'm not dead," she says, laughing heartily. "Anyway, he said to me, 'I'm Clint Black and you've always been a favorite of mine. When I was young, I remember you telling that story about what Judge Hay said to you that first night you were here.' I asked him if he sang and he smiled and said that he tried. I told him, 'You just remember that every time you go out on that stage to sing to your audience and you'll be okay.' And he sure has been okay!"

After that first audition, Sarah Ophelia Colley was told to come back the next week in costume—and the rest is history. This November, Minnie Pearl will celebrate her 50th anniversary with the Grand Ole Opry.

Although she claims to have cut down on her rigorous schedule (27 years of one-night stands from 1940 to 1967), there are still "too many fun things to do" to leave Sarah Cannon—or Miss Minnie—idle. A museum/showcase at Nashville's Opryland themepark keeps her in personal touch with her fans. Her husband and business manager, Henry Cannon, to whom she's been married for more than 40 years, runs the museum. Both of them are deeply involved in charitable and community affairs. She also makes numerous appearances on network television shows and is a weekly guest on the Nashville Network's Nashville Now program.

What has kept Miss Minnie so popular and in demand through the years? She has changed with the times in some ways, yet has also managed to remain that innocent, country girl in other ways.

"The audience today wants Miss Minnie to be selfish," Cannon claims. "Back then, they appreciated the fact that she was a little shy and unsure of herself. But through it all, she has never been pretty, has never been a challenge to the women, and men think, 'Oh, good grief, that old girl is crazy...' So I wasn't a challenge, I wasn't a threat. Today when I take the stage, it is a different Miss Minnie that people see. She's sure of herself...and as a matter of fact...I love the audience and I don't care whether they laugh or not. Fortunately, they still do, but most important, they're my friends. They don't ask much of me now, only that I love them. And I do, very much. And they ask that I tell those same old jokes...and I do."

From that very first Grand Ole Opry appearance when Roy Acuff introduced Miss Minnie Pearl as a little country girl who wanted to come up on stage and talk, she has been talking to millions of fans who very obviously care as much and love Minnie Pearl as much as Minnie Pearl loves her audience. She is truly the Queen of the Grand Ole Opry. ○

COUNTRY TIDBIT: THE COUNTRY-ROCK BAND the Shooters recently played at a benefit concert for victims of a tornado that struck Huntsville, Alabama. The group helped raise more than $3,000 for the city's United Way relief effort. Shooters members say that the tornado hit close to home when they heard that their former sound-man, Jeff Everett, was in the tornado. Everett, a Huntsville native, was not injured, although he was in his truck when it was blown into a utility pole. Everett organized the Torn-aid concert, which featured the Shooters, Foghat, the Decoys and Revolver, to help those not as lucky as he was.

The November 15 tornado killed 20 people and injured another 500, causing damage estimated at approximately $3 million.

□ RICKY VAN SHELTON: *Ricky Van Shelton III (Columbia 45250)

Ricky Van Shelton III brings us what Ricky Van Shelton does best—soul-wrenching ballads that could tug at even the coldest-blooded of hearts. He sings of true love in "You Would Do the Same For Me" and "Life's Little Ups and Downs," of lost love in "Not That I Care" and his own "I Still Love You," and of the possibilities of love in "Love Is Burnin'" and Roy Orbison's "Oh Pretty Woman." There are only two covers on this project (Orbison's and "Statue of a Fool," which Jack Greene took to #1 in 1967), and with expert production by Steve Buckingham, and Shelton's sensuous, heart-felt vocals, we hope to hear more of the new from this multi-talented artist.

Single Releases

Out of the Box

□ VINCE GILL "Oklahoma Swing" (MCA MCA-53780)

There's fire in this tune! MCA recording artist Vince Gill really gives us some country juice with this song about dancing, Oklahoma style. Produced by Tony Brown, "Oklahoma Swing" is perhaps one of the hottest country up-beats I've heard in a while. Complete with energizing music and a gutsy contribution from label-mate Reba McEntire, this fine piece of material is long overdue. Although McEntire comes off as a little too dominant, Gill manages to flaunt his irresistibly smooth vocals with just the right touch of country class.

Country Feature Picks

□ THE KENTUCKY HEADHUNTERS: "Dumas Walker" (Mercury 876536-7)

As far as I'm concerned, these good ol' boys can call country music home. With their follow-up to "Walk Softly on This Heart of Mine," the Kentucky Headhunters are back and at their best. "Dumas Walker," produced and arranged by the Heads themselves, opens our ears to electrifying country nestled in sweet southern comfort. This explosion of a tune, delivered with an almost daring harmony, should also find sweet comfort at the top of the chart.

□ LEE ROY PARNELL: "Crocodile Tears" (Arista ASI-9912)

Riding in on the wave of uniqueness is "Crocodile Tears." Arista recording artist Lee Roy Parnell should definitely accept the credit for this. His from-the-soul gravely vocals add just the right punch to this rock-and-rollish country tune, produced by Barry Beckett and Tim Dubois.

□ JEFF STEVENS & THE BULLETS: "Boomtown" (Atlantic 7-88790)

A small town on the rise just might not turn out for the best. This thought passes through the mind as Jeff Stevens & the Bullets give us their version of a "Boomtown." Produced by Nelson Larkin, "Boomtown" throws out some great lyrics and a dashing performance. Holding onto a laid-back vocal display, Stevens & the Bullets pull this one off well.

□ ALAN JACKSON: "Here in the Real World" (Arista ASI-9922)

Ya know, there's just something about this song that's almost magical... Arista recording artist Alan Jackson definitely has that familiar voice of tradition, yet it's overwhelmingly real—not exaggerated in the least. "Here in the Real World," produced by Keith Stegall and Scott Hendricks, gives us incredible lyrics with just the right hooks. This cut offers a strong sense of comfort and a vocal range that's totally soothing.

ASCAP MOVES!! ASCAP recently moved down the street to 66 Music Square West where they will be located for the next 18 months. CHARLIE DANIELS FIDDLES AROUND WITH JOAN RIVERS: Epic recording artist Charlie Daniels has been making the rounds on the talk-show circuit, talking about his controversial current single, "Simple Man." Daniels has appeared, or is scheduled to appear, on Entertainment Tonight, CBS Nightwatch, People are Talking, In Sports, The Joan Rivers Show (pictured), Sonja Live, The Arsenio Hall Show and Nashville Now.

TIME OUT FOR "TIME'S UP"... Warner Brothers artists Southern Pacific take a break with current duet partner and labelmate, Carlene Carter. J.D. Hart (photo: Empire Studios)

IF YOU'RE LOOKING FOR ANOTHER ONE-MAN, COWBOY-HAT FASHION SHOW, you'll be out of luck. If it's the cry of twang you're expecting, you've got the wrong man. New Capitol recording artist J.D. Hart is far from being considered traditional country, but with rich traditional roots in his pockets, a sing-it-from-the-soul voice and a focus on feel-good music, he's, without a doubt, country at its best, and country we need to hear.

At age six, back in Albemarle, North Carolina, Hart's grandfather taught him to play the guitar. When he was seven, he entered his first talent show and by the age of ten, he'd already cut his first record—Hank Williams' classic "Kaw Liga" with Johnny Cash's "Folsom Prison Blues" on the flip-side. Although the traditional roots have remained a part of his music throughout the years, the sound that Hart delivers today incorporates a sure-fire sound of the '90s.

"I'm not a twang singer," admits Hart, "but I am a country singer. So that's my direction. I think there's not enough good up-tempo country out on radio right now. My grandfather was a twang singer. When I would sing, he would say 'Son, put a little more twang to it,' and I just couldn't do it. I've always tried to remain true to the way that I've always sung and that's the results you have. I know that the twang singers and the hat acts are having great success right now, and I have a lot of admiration and appreciation for that, but all I can be is what I am."

When Hart first hit Nashville five years ago, he hit with a lot of determination and a keen awareness of just how tough it is to launch a spot in the music industry. Although it took quite a bit of time and patience, his undying determination became the victor. Hart started getting results when MCA's Jimmy Bowen heard Hart and signed him as an artist. When Bowen formed Universal, he invited Hart to join him.

Hart's major introduction to the airwaves came last November when he released his first single, "Come Back Brenda." The tune marks a definite reflection of his soul-bound and up-tempo music, which will perhaps become a Hart trademark for years to follow. After recently signing with Capitol Records, Hart is currently preparing material for his debut album.

"The new album is still in the works," says Hart. "As a matter of fact, I've just turned in some brand new material that I've been working on. The direction is basically up-tempo, a very acoustic sound. I just call it simply country without the twang."

"I've always written, but I really didn't know how important it was to write until I came to Nashville," he admits. "There's a lot of great songwriters in this town. I found that out immediately. As I'd go around to the publishing companies and listen to songs, and I've heard many great songs that I've passed on that became hits later. They just didn't feel right for me, though. I wanted to look inside of me and try to figure out who that criminal is in there and write about that—something that when I sing it or I record it, that I can really believe it, because it came right from what's inside of me. That's why my songwriting is so important. I've sung other people's songs and they just never really came off as being [as] believable as when I'd do my own songs. That doesn't mean I'm opposed to doing anybody else's. Anybody would be a fool to turn down a great song, no matter where it comes from, but I am partial to writing my own."

Hart admits that most of the songs he wrote when he first moved to Nashville weren't really that good. However, with time and experience lending a hand over the past few years, he now realizes there's much more reality to actually write about.

"I think I've done a lot of living in the last five years," Hart proclaims. "I remember having a comfortable job in Florida. I was an aluminum salesman. I got up at seven, went to work, came home at five, watched TV and enjoyed my marital life at the time. I was married at seventeen, therefore there just weren't a lot of deep emotional things in my life at that time until I made the move here. I don't like to dwell on the negative things, but the financial struggles and the divorce does open your pores and lets a lot of new growth come into your life. You begin to look at things in a very different way. Looking on the positive side of that, it makes for some great songwriting. So I came to Nashville for growth too, not just to become a recording artist."

The new year already holds much in store for Hart, including the release of his first album, a concert tour scheduled in Japan, a third appearance on Nashville Now and something that he refers to as a dream come true... "Yeah, I'll be filming Hee Haw in June," Hart says with a broad grin. "I'm real excited about that, because it seems like I've watched that show ever since I was born. It was always a fantasy of mine as a kid, to be on that show one day."

Something else Hart hee-haws about these days is his upcoming marriage to Gi Gi Garner, daughter of actor, James Garner. "She's just so supportive of me and my music. She's a country fan and she gets that from her dad," says Hart. "She also moved to Nashville about six years ago, so we both write and try to help each other and be a support system. God knows you need that kind of support in this business."

Without a doubt, he has already left his mark on country music, but it should be just a matter of time before we mark Hart as one of the top country artists of the '90s.

"Country music is expanding and evolving, and I think that should be one of the goals—let's make country music the greatest music worldwide," Hart asserts. "I really think that can be done if artists continue to reach out and try new avenues."

■ JACK DIAMOND: "Stoned to the Bone (With the Blues)" (Roto Noto RN1089)

The blues just couldn't be any worse—to hear Diamond sing it, that is. Along with snappy music and great production, Diamond gives us a rich traditional voice with a most appropriate western flair.

Indie Feature Pick

■ MICHAEL TERRY: "Heart of Luv" (Roto Noto RN1090)

Produced by Paul Hotchkiss, "Heart of Luv" turns out to be a nice mid-tempo tune with a sweet message behind it. Terry's soft-spoken vocals carry the song really well. "Heart of Luv" offers a charming music ensemble, along with an overall sense of mellowness.

Indie Insight

FOLLOWING HIS INDUCTION INTO the Country Music Hall of Fame in October of last year, Hank Thompson has been on a career "dash" that has literally carried him around the globe.

During the last three months of 1989, Thompson's Goodwill Ambassadorship of Western Swing took him on a series of concerts in Japan, Brazil and throughout the United Kingdom. He slowed down long enough to enjoy the holidays with his wife, Anne, in Texas, and now it's full steam ahead into the new decade.

LIKE A LOT OF FOLKS, singer/songwriter Jerry Jeff Walker entered the new decade flat on his back. But at least Walker had a valid excuse—he was recovering from lower-back surgery, which was performed on December 29. Goodheartedly, Walker blames his current miseries on the toll inflicted by carrying more than his fair share of managers and agents around on his back.

Walker plans to use his down-time to read, write some songs for his next recording project, watch ESPN basketball and work on his autobiography with his good friend, Earl Casey. He'll also be fine-tuning the details of his 48th birthday party, which will be celebrated March 17-18 in Austin, Johnson City, and Luckenbach, Texas.

This marks the fifth year that Walker has used the occasion of his birthday to throw a party for fans and friends alike.

GUY SHANNON HAS A NEW record that has just shipped to radio stations all over America. It has been released on Hot News Records, and is called "Take Another Chance on Me." Shannon has had a number of great songs that you might remember, such as "Naughty Girl," which was a Top 30 song for him, and "Soul Deep," a Top 20 song. Shannon is now managed by Al Embry, who is also currently booking the legendary Mickey Gilley and has worked with "The Killer" Jerry Lee Lewis and Fats Domino.

A GATHERING OF GREATS: Hank Thompson's induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame called for a celebration of Texas-size proportions. A turnout of some of the Lone Star state's biggest names were on hand for a special reception honoring Thompson in Roanoke, Texas. On hand to congratulate the legendary "Honkytonk King of Western Swing" are (l to r): Former Dallas Cowboy football great, Walt Garrison; Texas radio legend, Bill Mack; Thompson and Jim "Shootin'" Newton, who broadcasts with Mack over WBAP Radio.

Nicholas:

Success and Commitment Go Hand in Hand

BY KIMMY WIX

THEY'RE OFTEN REFERRED TO AS THE SWEETHEARTS OF GOSPEL. Actually, Phillip and Brenda Nicholas are much more than mere sweethearts. As a husband/wife duo, the two create a highly distinguished Christian ministry. Although their personal ministry continues to blossom on stage, their music is also on an accelerating rise as well. Perhaps their latest project, More Than Music, is indeed much more than just a title.

Both Phil and Brenda grew up having a heavy musical influence. Phil first plunged into gospel music when he formed the Nicholas Choral Ensemble while in the eleventh grade. Prior to this, he was impressed by the likes of Marvin Gaye and the Hawkins Family. Although the two influences were from both the secular and gospel markets, it caused the realization of just how much could be said with a song.

Brenda's influences came from the likes of Dionne Warwick, Aretha Franklin and various pop singers. It wasn't until singing with Phil, at the National Convention of Gospel Choirs and Choruses in St. Louis in 1973, that she entered into a personal relationship with God and found the desire to sing gospel music.

In 1978, the two were married. This not only marked a time to begin their personal growth, but to also begin a rapid growth in the music ministry. Sparking their first gospel hit together was their Christian version of the classic Roberta Flack/Donny Hathaway tune, "The Closer I Get to You." It was only a matter of time before Phil and Brenda headed for L.A., wondering what would be next.

It was only a couple of years before the two were married that Phil had joined a group called Spirit, which had been formed for an evangelism crusade. Not long after their return to L.A., Spirit broke up without finishing an album they had recently started. Along with two members of the original Nicholas Choral Ensemble, Phil and Brenda simply took over Spirit's bookings and repertoire and began performing as Nicholas.

Since then, Nicholas has recorded six commanding projects, including Tell The World, Words Can't Express, Dedicated and their most recent, More Than Music. Phil has garnered numerous awards and nominations, including a 1986 Grammy nomination and both the Dove and Stellar Award nominations. He has also taken home the Golden Eagle Award from the Southern California Motion Picture Council for Best Overall Gospel Album of the Year and the Golden Note Award in Canada for Best Foreign Gospel Recording.

Just recently, their label, Hollywood-based Command Records, has signed a multi-year manufacturing and distribution agreement with Word/A&M. This conjunction has definitely opened the doors quite a bit wider for the "Gospel Sweethearts."

"The changes have really enhanced our ministry," says Phil. "We're in front of more people. It's enabled us to soften up, as far as being able to relate to people and minister to people. It's given us all the various things to really present the Gospel through music effectively. Right now, we're seeing a good harvest and we extend that invitation."

The title of the new Nicholas album

does, in fact, represent much more than just a title. More Than Music simply defines Phil and Brenda and their ministerial efforts.

"With us, we're very ministry-oriented," admits Phil. "We always have an altar call and the people actually do come down, so we're able to really see the response. With our music, we try to make it relevant for today. The issues and topic that we sing about deal with teenage suicide, relationships, marriages and divorces. We really lean into those areas very heavily, so the response all the way around from letters, cards and the response from the audiences have been blessings to us. That's the most exciting part of the whole thing."

Being a husband/wife duo has definitely played a significant part of their ministry. Some refer to it almost as a niche, but according to Phil and Brenda, it's just something else the Lord has blessed them with to use with their love for music.

"What actually happens is you have girls who are looking at the situation where there's a woman who has a husband and he's a Christian. Then you have the men who look at Phillip like, 'Hey, I can still be a man and love the Lord too,'" explains Brenda. "You have people looking at you that way and then you also have people really looking at it like, 'You can really love each other and that marriage can work.' That's one thing that we really want to get across to young people—that you go into marriage with commitment. So far, that's really working for us. We always have people who run up to us after a show and say 'We just love your marriage ministry.' Then when an audience sees young people, such as ourselves, being really on fire for the Lord and seeing that we love Him dearly, they begin to realize that they can relate and look to God for answers."

A while back, listeners just couldn't seem to place Nicholas in its appropriate category. Although they currently appeal to the black, white, male, female, young, old, traditional, contemporary Christian and non-Christian, earlier white gospel radio programmers considered their style to be "too black" and black gospel programmers considered their style to be "too white."

"Actually, we've compromised a little bit in the sense of what we've done has become more authentic on both sides," Phil ponders. "In other words, on this new album we have some authentic black music with a major choir. Then at the same time, on the other side, we've got a couple of great contemporary songs. Of course we've stayed in the middle too with our love ballads. This album is kind of an experiment, because we've stretched it and polarized it a little more. So we're biting our nails and at the same time, we're really excited. What I tried to do on this album is really take the best of everything we've done. So we looked at all of the various things that we've done and said 'I want to grab the best of everything, put it all on this album and then also step out a little bit further and do a few more things. It's all a good blend of traditional and contemporary and I think this project is a cut above anything else we've done.'"

Phil and Brenda Nicholas are also Mama and Daddy to ten-year-old Jennifer. Being parents has also contributed to their success in music. Perhaps parenthood simply adds another niche to their niche of actually relating to their audiences so well. Whether this dynamic couple is at home as a family or on stage as Nicholas, they say the blessings of their success have arrived from simply being committed to the Lord.

"No matter how many people are in the audience, we've just always sung like there were a billion of them out there," says Brenda. "We've just always thought that somebody out there needs to hear this, and the Lord has always blessed us because of that commitment." ○

Album Review

▣ THE SPEERS: *He's Still in the Fire (Homeland HC8911)

Their name itself is a legend, but the Speers' music and ministry seems to live on forever. Currently, with two generations carrying on the legend, the Speers continue to give us a taste of traditional Southern gospel music, with no ruffles added. Their most recent project, He's Still in the Fire, definitely offers some fire-based tunes, such as the title cut, which is also the current single release. However, it's those tunes that strike a slower beat that grab my attention. Cuts like "Standing in the Presence of the King" and "Things Too Broken to Mend" seem to crawl right up into the heart and begin to work. He's Still in the Fire presents us with variety in both lyrics and vocal delivery, not to mention some sizzling piano licks. It would be appropriate, however, for the Speers to build some tighter harmony on a couple of cuts, as well as to incorporate a tad more spunk into some of the mid-tempos.

NASHVILLE—Independent radio promoter Tana Lonon announces a long-term promotion agreement with recording artists the Pfeifers. The current single, "Blood Bought Church," is climbing the national charts and is recorded on their Royalty album, titled Blood Bought Church. jukebox centennial. The festivities took place at the Rowe facilities in Grand Rapids, Michigan, where guests enjoyed a tour of the plant, a dinner party the preceding evening, a tour of the famous Rowe museum and, of course, a birthday luncheon complete with a big jukebox cake and

CHICAGO—Parker Brothers announced its entrance into the Nintendo video game category with its first cartridge game (for the Nintendo System) called Heavy Shreddin', a snowboarding sports action game based on the fast-growing winter sport that is becoming increasingly popular in the U.S., Europe and Japan. Snowboarding is a combination of downhill surfing, skateboarding and sailboarding.

In Heavy Shreddin', players travel down snow-covered mountains on a board much larger and wider than a ski, competing in slalom, downhill, halfpipe, mogul and backwoods events, for high scores and the ultimate World Cup Snowboarding Trophy. The game tests players' skills at daredevil shredding stunts including death-defying jumps over waterfalls and astonishing flights over ski chalets as they shred over logs, ice and moguls. All of the thrills and adventure of the sport are authentically portrayed, complete with outstanding graphics and animation.

Trivial Pursuit, The Computer Game is being offered by Parker Brothers for IBM personal computers and compatible PCs and it captures all of the fun and excitement of the famous board game in a lively, animated version. Up to four players can participate at one time, challenging one another, or playing against six different animated characters with various levels of expertise in different subjects on the computer.

There is a wide variety of questions to choose from, including such subjects as Pre-Elvis, Post Beatles, Movie Settings, Baseball Personalities in the

Parker Brothers, based in Beverly, Massachusetts, is a leading developer of quality games and toys and a pioneer in the home entertainment industry. The introduction of the computerized version of Trivial Pursuit marked the company's entry into the PC software market. As noted by John Call, Parker Brothers' director of marketing, "Launching into the IBM and IBM compatible systems market with the Trivial Pursuit game allows us to take advantage of high levels of consumer awareness for instant recognition at retail."

This model will be available during the first quarter of 1990 and the company's other PC titles will be announced in the near future.

Atari's Skull & Crossbones Kit

CHICAGO—Skull & Crossbones, the newest universal kit from Atari Games, offers a swashbuckling adventure where players portray two pirates competing for food, drink, booty and revenge. Players use a joystick and button to control the unique sword-fighting action in a combination of defensive and offensive maneuvers to battle the various enemies. Players can learn the lunge and backlash, which are two of the most effective skilled-sword fighting moves.

"Skull & Crossbones is a unique application of the fighting games that remain so popular with players today," commented Linda Benzler, product manager for Atari. "There is a lot of depth to the game with a great variety of opponents and colorful playfield backgrounds."

As play begins, there is an encounter with the evil Wizard who robs the heroes of all of their booty. The pirates swear revenge and set off on a quest to destroy the Wizard and recover their treasure.

The quest takes players on an adventure around the world during which the pirates battle the fierce captains and crews of opponent ships, and encounter the soldier guards and the merciless executioner in the Spanish Castle. In the ninja camp they fight the karate master and his followers; on the beach the heroes encounter the dreaded Medusa and a horde of wicked skeletons that rise from the dead.

When the pirates finally reach the Wizard's island, they must again do battle against the shadow figures of the executioner, the ninja master and the Medusa before they can fight face to face with the evil Wizard. If they make it to the throne room and overcome the Wizard, players are rewarded with a room full of treasure.

Skull & Crossbones became available as a horizontal kit at the end of November. The kit includes the game PCB, a JAMMA harness, attraction decal, side decals, control panel decal, a set of eight-position joysticks and buttons.

AROUND THE ROUTE

BY CAMILLE COMPASIO

THIS IS THE YEAR of the pinball machine as it turns 60, so be assured, there'll be a lot of promotions and special campaigns in progress over the next 12 months. John Bell of Bell's Music in Vicksburg, Mississippi, is chairman of the AMOA-appointed Pinball Promotion Committee. When I spoke with him this past week, he indicated that there are a lot of irons in the fire. ~"Our main objective is to create more awareness on the part of the public and also generate increased interest on the operator level," Bell said. The Committee was scheduled to meet in Chicago as we went to press. Keep tuned.

GETTING BACK TO WORK following our annual holiday shutdown at Cash Box is a little tough, but I'm giving it my best shot, so bear with me... Sorry to learn of the death, this past December, of veteran operator August Van Brackel (A. Van Brackel & Sons) in Defiance, Ohio. His son Don once served as president of AMOA. Sincere condolences to the Van Brackel family... The trade lost another prominent figure late last year: Joe Westerhaus, Sr. of Royal Distribution in Cincinnati. Our sympathy to Joe Jr. and the entire Westerhaus family...

IT'S IN DELIVERY! Yes indeed, the Rock-Ola Laser 2000 dedicated CD jukebox went into shipment a few short weeks ago and, as company exec Frank Schulz advised, "the response is terrific...we're in a demand-exceeding-supply situation right now, so we're asking everyone to please be patient while we step up production to get these models out." By the way, on December 29, 1989, Frank marked his 40th year at Rock-Ola. Nice goin' buddy—and here's to your next 40...

PLEASE MAKE NOTE that, as of January 16, 1990, the American Amusement Machine Association (AAMA) headquarters will be housed in its new location at 12731 Directors Loop, Woodbridge, Virginia 22192. Their phone number is (703) 494-2758; FAX is (703) 494-0616...

ON THE SINGLES SCENE—and we're talkin' vinyl. Jeff Tartol of Singer One Stop For Ops tells us the following are makin' it big on jukeboxes: "Opposites Attract" by Paula Abdul on Virgin; "I Go to Extremes" by Billy Joel on Columbia; and (in R&B locations) "It's Gonna Be Alright" by Ruby Turner on Jive. And here's one Singer is recommending for jukebox programming: Phil Collins' new "I Wish It Would Rain Down" on Atlantic...

MARK YOUR CALENDARS. I just received word that the seventh annual Billiard Congress of America international trade exposition has been slated for July 19-21 at the Commonwealth Convention Center in Louisville, Kentucky... The 1990 AMOA Government Affairs Conference will be taking place April 29-May 1 at the Washington Court Hotel in Washington, D.C. Among program highlights will be sessions on dollar coin legislation, jukebox licensing and legislation affecting tobacco vending; a briefing by AMOA officers and the association's government affairs liaison Robert Wilbur regarding key industry issues; and the usual round of Congressional visits with elected officials. AMOA will shortly issue a membership mailing containing further specifics as well as housing and registration info...

Capcom U.S.A.'s Buster Bros. And Final Fight

CAPCOM U.S.A. RECENTLY debuted two new video games, Buster Bros. and Final Fight. Both two-player interactive conversion kits are available through authorized Capcom distributors.

Buster Bros.

Exciting world travel while on a hunt is in store for patrons of Buster Bros. However, they will be in constant danger during their adventure that starts at the base of Mount Fuji. As giant balls fall from the sky, players take aim and shoot and when the balls are popped, they split into smaller, faster moving targets, which means more chances to win points. But watch out—if the balls touch a player, then the player gets knocked out! These balls, when divided, also drop weapons down, helping to arm the players with guns and twin darts. There is also a force field, which protects the player from one lethal hit.

Once Fuji has been conquered, the hunt moves on to Russia, India and Europe. There are 50 levels of action in Buster Bros., all full of colorful graphics that make cities and countryside around the world come alive.

Final Fight

Final Fight is the next in a series of CPS System games using Capcom's exclusive CPS Super Chip. In this one, Haggar, the original Street Fighter, returns as mayor of the city, his street fighting days behind him. But a final fight must be staged because Haggar's daughter Jessica has been kidnapped by the lawless Mad Gear Gang. The police have gone bad and there is no one to trust.

Players must use fists and feet, as well as knives and Molotov Cocktails to beat the gang. Players become Haggar or one of his mighty sidekicks, Cody (a martial arts expert) or Guy (a master of Ninjitsu), as the fighting spreads into subways, warehouses and wrestling rings, and engages the player in hand-to-hand combat with giants and Samurai swordsmen in the quest to save Jessica.

For further information, contact Cynthia Bruschi, marketing manager, Capcom U.S.A., Inc., 3303 Scott Blvd., Santa Clara, CA 95054, (408) 727-0400.

Williams' Bad Cats

CHICAGO—Barry Oursler and Python Anghelo have distinguished themselves over the years as two of the most talented pinball geniuses in the business. Their creations have included such classics as Pin Bot, Comet, and Cyclone (honored two years in a row as AMOA's "most played pinball machine"). Now this duo has teamed up again for a state-of-the-art pinball machine that's highlighted by its own unique backglass animation and a full complement of design innovations.

The new creation is Bad Cats and it breaks new ground with the introduction of an industry first—a totally new Linear Target (TM) to challenge today's players. The harder the Linear Target is hit, the greater the Fish Bone-Us value, which can build up to an amazing five million points.

As the action progresses, the cats are definitely on the prowl with an easy access center ramp that can reward an extra ball and increased scoring. But, once the players spell out B-A-D C-A-T-S, a Fishbowl Jackpot is possible for an incredible eight million points. It's the largest jackpot ever awarded on a pinball machine.

Building on the "easy to learn, difficult to master" adage for success, Bad

WILLIAMS' BAD CATS

Cats keeps the action going with a left-side Tiger Ramp that progressively increases in value to unlimited Million Point scoring with a new twist. On the last ball, five consecutive ramp shots gives players the single highest scoring value in history with a spectacular twenty million points.

There's more to come, however. When players enter Ralphie's doghouse, Bad Cats kicks into high gear with a spinning Seafood Table mystery wheel that can net a feast of values including extra ball, special, 100,000 points, or even a chance for an instant jackpot.

Sounds like pinball purr-fection, doesn't it? Further information may be obtained through factory distributors or by contacting Roger Sharpe at Williams Electronics Games, Inc., 3401 N. California Ave., Chicago, IL 60618.

The Love Man

Who takes you back to fleeting memories of romance and love songs? Who's filling the enormous gap left by crooners such as Marvin Gaye and Nat King Cole? The Balladeer of today is Dr. York, a native Nubian of North East Africa.

This most unique individual holds a Doctorate in Theology from the University of Al Azhar in Egypt and a Bachelor of Arts degree in Arabic and Semitic languages from Khartoum University.

You've seen his picture posterred across the United States, on the cover of BRE, in Billboard and Jack the Rapper. He's been interviewed by KISS-FM and commended for his achievement of success against all odds. As a youth, he pursued his musical career by do-wopping with groups like the Studants and Jackie and the Starlights. Through the Studants, he was introduced as The Love Man. If you caught his soon to be classic Christmas video, "Let Me Be the One on Christmas", you will understand why. He's come a long way since his first two sensual albums NEW and RENEW, with the hit tunes IT'S ONLY A DREAM and IT'S ON ME, which yielded dynamic music videos. He's closed for licensing in Japan and the United Kingdom. Dr. York has been touring, singing his old as well as new releases. Last year he wrote and produced the hot single and music video, SOMEONE'S BEEN SLEEPING IN MY BED. This year Dr. York has much in store, he's brought back Heat Wave's classic ALWAYS AND FOREVER. This mid-tempo is sure to be a chart topper. If you can sit this one out, you definitely haven't got also recently re-released this all-time favorite. It's a ballad that the Love Man himself loves; but the Doctor has come up with a midtempo to the beat of Sybil's DON'T MAKE ME OVER to rock the house! Don't let his love of love songs fool you, the man can dance and is a real party animal with up tempo tunes. Yet..., just so you don't forget what his specialty is, the flip side is the melodic PLEASE STAY and the re-release of IT'S ONLY A DREAM.
